

ENTHUSIASM You can do anything if you have enthusiasm. Enthusiasm is the yeast that makes your hopes shine to the stars. Enthusiasm is the sparkle in your eyes, the swing in your gait, the grip of your hand, the irresistible surge of will and energy to execute your ideas. Enthusiastic people are fighters. They radiate energy. They have staying power. Enthusiasm is the foundation for all progress. Passion goes hand in hand with performance. A lack of purpose is synonymous with making excuses. Enthusiasm is the foundation for all progress. Passion goes hand in hand with performance. A lack of purpose is synonymous with making excuses. Henry Ford The Thrill It is actually preferable to have your own business in the year 2003. You are responsible for your own actions and you do not need to depend on decisions made by your superiors. You decide when and how long to work. You decide how long you want to take to reach your goal. Once you start looking for a job, you are already considered a dope: What is your expected salary? May I take a look at your CV? There you are, sitting at a desk, talking to someone you don't know and that person is going to determine whether or not you are suited for the job you are interviewing for. It is actually much easier to be self-employed. You already have a plan (see Chapter 2). Just have some business cards made and set up appointments with potential customers. Once you are meeting face to face with a potential customer, it is up to you to explain how your product will benefit him. The situation is now completely different, just by positioning yourself differently through your own business! Being your own boss will open doors that would otherwise remain closed. People respect the director or the founder of the company. It often makes no difference in which industry you start, the result of the actions you undertake to make your company successful ends up in your wallet when it is all said and done. If you are employed with a company, you can do your best and earn all types of bonuses etc. However, in the end, it's the owner who walks away with the credit. If you are self-employed, you are the one who claims all the credit. How often do you have to apply for a job to find the right one? Use that energy to look for customers instead and you will undoubtedly be more successful. Nowadays it is more advantageous and safer for an employer to outsource certain activities (actually it has always been more advantageous, but it is a good selling point). Why hire someone to do a certain job if an outsourcer can provide the same service better, faster and at a more favourable cost? Think about all the energy that you are presently investing in your job. If you were to invest that same energy into your own business, would it be successful? The answer is a resounding YES! Often, it's just a matter of taking that first step. Obviously you have your monthly bills to pay and you have job security; however, what is job security if a superior can fire you or ask you to resign from one day to the next? What about drawing unemployment benefits? Is that what you really want? Take your future into your own hands and start your own business! Starting your own business is the ultimate venture! Beginning a business from the ground up is the ultimate experience for everyone. It makes no difference how much education you have had, what your background is, whether you are rich or poor, ugly or old, the only thing that counts is just getting out there and doing it. Just do it, the thrill will follow on its own!
